

THE WRITE PATH CYMRU

Helping your child become a confident writer

We want every child to enjoy writing and feel confident when they put pen to paper. To make that happen, we have started to use a new approach, developed by schools in Wales for schools in Wales – The Write Path Cymru.

This approach makes writing clear and enjoyable, helping every child to see themselves as a writer, and we want to share with you how it works and how you can help your child.

What it looks like in class

Children write every day through an easy-to-follow routine:

1. Hook – something exciting to spark ideas
2. Model – exploring a great example of writing
3. Sentence & Word Days – short tasks to build skills
4. Planning & Writing – creating their own version
5. Editing & Sharing – improving and celebrating their work

The difference it's making

Schools using The Write Path Cymru have seen:

- Children who are more confident and motivated to write
- Better spelling, grammar and vocabulary
- Clear progress for all learners
- More enjoyment in writing lessons

How you can help at home

We know children make the best progress when school and home work together. You can make a big difference by:

- Talking about ideas – ask about what they're writing or learning. These chats help children build better ideas and develop confidence.
- Reading together – reading stories, comics or information books helps children learn new words and become more imaginative writers.
- Encouraging writing of all kinds – shopping lists, cards, emails or notes all help children practise using language for real purposes. Don't force them to write, but give them opportunities where they can help you.
- Celebrating effort – praise ideas, creativity and persistence, not just neat handwriting or spelling.

Thank you for working with us to help every child enjoy writing and reach their full potential.
